This course surveys data structures and explores their different implementations with a focus on their manipulating algorithms. The objective is to effectively use data structures and their manipulating algorithms to design and implement efficient solutions and to develop problem-solving skills required in the data science paradigm. The course introduces approaches to algorithm design, including divide and conquer, greedy algorithms, and dynamic programming and will draw on applications from data science.